

ABSTRACT

An electronic device furnished with magnetic screening having a peak of resonant magnetic losses. The screening includes at least one inductive winding constituted by at least one segment of metallic wire wound around at least one assembly of magnetic filaments.